Welcome to mPark

Whangarei's smartphone parking payment method

What is mPark?

mPark allows customers to pay for parking via their smartphone.

How does it work?

Set up your account at mPark.co.nz and register a vehicle or multiple vehicles to the account.

Use a credit card to load funds onto your account.

When you park your car log on to mPark.co.nz from your smartphone.

Select the vehicle you want to park, the zone number you want to park in and the duration you want to park for.

Parking zone numbers will be clearly marked on the existing parking meters.

The parking fee is debited from your account and our database updated to say your parking has been paid for.

Parking wardens can then check the database for your vehicle's number plate.

No coins, no paper tickets, no waiting at the Pay and Display machines.

No running back to feed the meter. mPark will send an email to your smartphone to remind you that your parking is due to expire and allow you to top up, all without having to return to your car.

What does it cost?

There is a credit card transaction charge that varies depending on the amount you load onto your account and only applies when you load money onto your account. Please note this is not an mPark charge, it simply covers bank credit card fees.

These credit card processing fees are clearly stated when you top up your account.

Why use mPark?

Convenience

You no longer have to look for change, find a parking machine, stand in the rain to wait to use the parking machine or find another parking machine if the machine is out of order.

Avoid parking fines

Receive an email reminder to your phone 10 minutes prior to your parking running out.

Top up remotely

No running back to feed the meter. Extend your parking remotely. Great if you're running late at the doctor.
